120 DEAD IN MINE EXPLOSION

Many Bodies in Washington, Pa., Shaft May Never be Found.

RESCUERS WORK IN RELAYS

They Are Encountering Great Difficulties and Have Little Hope of Finding Any Alive.

Washington, Pa., April 25.—The rescuers coming from the depths of the wrecked Cleinhurst mine of the Pittsburgh Coal company declare that the number of dead in the explosion will not run less than 120, with a possibility that the number may be greater than this.

That the exact number of dead may never be known seems highly probable, for the indications are that it will be impossible to reach many of the bodies.

Eighteen bodies have been brought out of the mine and taken to the morgue. It was stated that four more bodies have been found in the mine. The bodies found were not far from the entrance.

The rescue parties are hourly encountering great difficulties. The gangs are out of order and there is imminent danger of the mine flooding. Some of the brakes are running full of water and others have clogged and overflowed. The rescue parties seeking bodies are working in a foot of water.

The government mine experts are reinforced by rescue crews from five different mines in the neighborhood, but the deadly fire damp badly impedes rapid progress.

It is now believed, although neither official nor list is finished, that there were two explosions, one close after the other. The first explosion is believed to have been of gas probably ignited by a miner with an open lamp. Soon after this it is thought there was a gas explosion, this second explosion probably causing many deaths.

Coroner James Heffren, himself a practical miner of many years' experience, started in on his investigation of the accident. He empanelled a jury and the members of the jury are all of the mine visiting various parts of the workings and interviewing survivors.

HANGMAN BUNGLED

Rope Was Too Long and Man Was Hanged Almost Three Times.

Uniontown, Pa., April 25.—Due to bungling on the part of some officials, John Harris, a colored man, condemned to death, was not executed until the humanity that is supposed to characterize hanging.

Harris was placed on the scaffold at the county jail here and when it was sprung the rope was about three feet too long. Harris fell to the ground on account beneath the scaffold, and with the rope around his neck he landed on his knees, where he remained motionless for several minutes.

It was thought the drop had broken his neck until he started to rise to his feet. Then the sheriff and his deputies sprang to the scaffold, pulled up Harris' body by the rope until his feet were clear of the flooring.

For eighteen minutes the condemned man struggled and writhed, his contortions evoking the intense agony of strangling to death. Harris shot and killed a colored man last May.

Cleveland, April 25.—Indictments charging embezzlement and grand larceny were returned by the county grand jury against Peter F. Seiler, a $60 a month clerk employed at the Globe and Furnace company.

The company charges that he stole $30,000 worth of brass from it, answering the charges in loads of junk sold to junk dealers.

LAWRENCE O. MURRAY.

Comptroller of Currency, Who May Quit.

COMPTROLLER READY TO QUIT

Murray Refuses to Comment on Banking Chaos.

Washington, April 25.—Comptroller of the Currency Murray declined to comment on Secretary McAdoo's statement that the presence of a clerk representing the National City bank in the comptroller's office to collect statistical information was "improper and irregular" except to say that the secretary's orders forbidding a combination of the private bankers must be obeyed.

Mr. Murray's five-year term expires on Saturday, and the comptroller indicated that he would leave the government service then, even if his successor has not been appointed.

MAY ACCUSE SON IN KILLING FATHER

Edward Hummel May be Tried For Murder.

Pottsville, Pa., April 25. — Bertha Hummel, who was arrested by state police, charged with the murder of her father at Tower City, will likely be tried on the May session of criminal court.

It is now said that the girl's brother, Edward, who was arrested as a witness, but not held, will be a defendant. It is said Edward is unable to account for his movements at the time the shots were fired which killed his father. It is said that he was seen in a field near the scene of the murder at the time.

One of the strongest reasons the police have for believing that the elder Hummel was murdered is the fact that he received two severe injuries, which were found unused on his body. He was the receiver bought by Bertha was lying by his side when he was found dead.

What was the motive which might have actuated Bertha Hummel in firing the fatal shot, if she did fire it, does not appear clearly to the average person on the outside, although it is believed there no doubt have their own opinion of it and will have the case in the light as the May term of criminal court, if they decide to try the case then.

GIVE SKIN TO SAVE FATHER

Two Sons Submit to Operation to Save Parent.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., April 25.—Lemuel, Jr., and Benjamin Thomas, sons of Lemuel Thomas, of this city, have submitted to an operation for skin grafting that they might save enough out from their bodies and grafted to the back of their father, who is suffering of saving his life.

The father suffered from a large carbuncle on the back, and doctors told him that the only hope for recovery was an operation. The sons volunteered at once to supply what skin was needed to cover the father's wound, and the operations were carried out from their bodies, twelve from Lemuel, Jr., and eleven from Benjamin. The operation was successful and the father is improving rapidly.

AUSTRIA MAY ATTACK SCUTARI

Sends Ultimatum to the European Powers.

SITUATION LOOKS SERIOUS

Declares She Will Drive Montenegrins Out If Powers Don't Take Combined Action.

London, April 25.—"Take immediate combined action to turn the Montenegrins out of Scutari, or we shall do it alone," declares a circular note sent by the Austro-Hungarian government to the powers. The note is virtually an ultimatum.

Austria-Hungary declares she can not permit the Montenegrins to flout the decision of the great powers. Two prestige of the European nations have been violated, says the note, and Austria-Hungary demands that the powers act promptly or she will be forced to take action to restore that prestige. Then the Austro-Hungarian note says that should be unable to reach a speedy decision she will act alone. "Should Europe the will of Europe is respected and not the Montenegrins vacate Scutari."

"Scutari is from today Montenegrin," the Austrian note declares in comment on Secretary McAdoo's statement that the presence of a clerk representing the National City bank in the comptroller's office to collect statistical information was "improper and irregular" except to say that the secretary's orders forbidding a combination of the private bankers must be obeyed.

Mr. Murray's five-year term expires on Saturday, and the comptroller indicated that he would leave the government service then, even if his successor has not been appointed.

WILSON CONFERS ON PATRONAGE

Meets Senators and Representatives at Capitol.

Washington, April 25. — President Wilson's visit to the capitol — the third in his eight weeks of office — was another precedent-breaking trip.

Other presidents had gone to the capitol to read their addresses or messages to Congress, as Mr. Wilson did, but there was no record of any other president going there to save time in talking about appointments.

The president told friends that the arrangement of walking for the senators to come to the White House to solved a great loss of time, so he proposed to go to his room in the capitol, where he might confer with senators quickly on the "plums" to be distributed.

Senator Kern was the president's first caller. Senators Sheppard and Fletcher followed. Then Representatives Burnett and Goodwin, of Alabama; Hughes, Howard and Bell, of Georgia, and Slemp, Collier and Brossius, of Mississippi, all asked Mr. Wilson to appoint W. V. Turley, of Chattanooga, Tenn., as public printer.

"What did the president say?" they were asked.

"He listened very politely and smiled," was the reply.

The door to the president's room was left wide open and the small group in the corridor could see him in conversation with his callers.

AT ODDS OVER THE TELEPHONE

County Commissioners Order Bell Telephone Removed because a Toll of Fifteen Cents per Call is Charged to East Berlin.

At a meeting of the county commissioners held on Tuesday, the Bell Telephone Company was directed to disconnect its service with the Commissioners' office May 2.

The contract the commissioners had with the Bell Company was entered into on April 18, 1911 and under it and, by mutual understanding, the anniversary St. Rock and Mr. Sherrytown—has been free since Littlestown was opened free last summer.

This action on the part of the commissioners was brought about by the fact that from the date the Bell telephone was placed in the commissioners office East Berlin and Abbottstown have been free to their office to January 1913. Since the Bell Company has further developed the Abbottstown and East Berlin territory as well as Hamilton and part of Reading township the company has, without notice to the commissioners, put that territory on the toll list at the rate of 15 cents for each message. The commissioners deem this an unjustifiable act on the part of the Bell Company and after having been unsuccessful in holding that they were entitled to get 25 a year and nine months; after a discussion of the matter with a representative of the Bell Company, took the action above mentioned.

The commissioners recognize the fact that their action will inconvenience some of the citizens of the county and it is their wish, they say, "in all fairness to be understood that in their dealings with corporations as well as with individuals they stand on the square deal, and that all contracts entered into, whether in writing or by mutual understanding, will be adhered to in good faith."

It is stated by representatives of the Bell Company that the toll is charged between Gettysburg and East Berlin for the reason that, already, the latter exchange were given the preference of free service to either York or Gettysburg and that they chose Yor. Local people talking to East Berlin could, if they chose, call a secondarily suffer, say the Bell people, on account of this choice.

PREPARE FOR MEMORIAL DAY

Usual Sunday Services and Observance on May Thirtieth. General Orders as to Manner of Observing the Day.

Arrangements for the observances of Memorial Day in Gettysburg indicate that the same general plan of other years will be followed. The name of the orator of the day has not yet been announced but the parade and services at the Soldiers' National Cemetery will be the same as before.

On Sunday afternoon preceding Memorial Day the annual memorial service will be held in the Post Room and Rev. Charles Gardner, pastor of the United Brethren church, has been invited to deliver the address in that line. Rev. Fr. Boyle, rector of St. Francis Xavier church, is planning to also follow the custom inaugurated a year ago by Rev. Fr. Dougherty, of holding a special service in the Catholic cemetery on the evening of Sunday May 25, at which time flowers will be strewn on the graves of veterans buried in that cemetery.

General order No. 9, Department of Pennsylvania Grand Army of the Republic, Thomas H. Cole commander, refers to the approaching Memorial Day and its proper observance. The Commander asks for a full observance under the rules and regulations of the department and asks the Sons of Veterans, the Women's Relief Corps, the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, the Daughters of Veterans and other patriotic societies to associate with them in the service.

Attention is also called to the proper time to display the flag on public quarters that, as a part of the public exercises of Memorial Day, bells be tolled from sunrise to noon, that flags be placed at half mast, and that graves of soldiers standing with uncovered heads during this period, as a part of the memories of Memorial Day, there will be read Lincoln's Gettysburg address and General Order No. 11, dated May 5, 1868, issued by our first Commander-in-chief, John A. Logan, establishing Memorial Day.

Post commanders are ordered to see that the patriotic programs in the public schools are carried out heretofore, on Friday, May 23, and that memorial services be held in the churches on the Sunday preceding Memorial Day, May 25.

The Department Commander includes this eloquent appeal in his order:

"It is for us, my comrades, we of the 'war guard', who form a thin picket line of the living along the life's rugged march, we whose shadows are falling fast behind us, and in whose ears the echo of taps that have sounded over our comrades long gone before, on this Sabbath day of the Grand Army of the Republic, to pledge anew our fidelity to memories, living or dead, to renew our obligations to the nation and comrades who fallen brave, and decorate with the choicest flowers that grow in the green mounds under which they peacefully sleep, unveiling the revelry of the immortal dead."

CHAPTER IV.

The Gunning.

GENERAL JOE JOHNSTON—like the other Confederate officer, but who had intrusted the supreme command to Beauregard on account of the latter's familiarity with the country—was able to keep from his headquarters eastward like a prescient bird over his nest and received intelligence just as a flood stirs over growing fern fronds. Federal army" had come up and was advancing upon his post. This should have been the Union reserves from Centerville, but it was not. It was General Robert Smith of the Army of the Shenandoah arriving with 8,000 fresh infantry. The whole southern line now advanced to the charge and the combined attack upon the Federal flank and front was decisive enough to turn the tide of battle from uncertainty to sudden panic. The lines of blue wavered and broke and back from the platform, across the Warrenton pike and on toward the Bull Run fords. The repulse became a rout, the rout grew into an appalling avalanche of defeat.

The Federal advance on the southern side of Bull Run had been a resistless mass of men for three hours, yet so long and stupendous were the lines with which to strengthen the advance.

Lieutenant General Beauregard had seventy years of age, burly, 55-inch waist around and shoulder were the prevailing lines. His shoes were heavy brogans tied with twine, and his soiled and worn clothes showed that he was without marks. An old shoulder hat was pulled over his face, and a tobacco leg hung from a button of his coat. The color of which was turned up to the side, originally of General Jackson's position in the battle of the 21st of July.

"Your part we have done," said Jones, "well, were you in the cavalry?"

"Yes, Jake, and proud of them. It I predict this portion of the state and to guard the Confederate capital," said Lieutenant General Banks, the Confederate government declared it was a war to arms in Winchester. This force, originally under the command of Gen. Patterson, was placed in command of Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, now advanced to the rank of a full general.

This was great news to the Richmond authorities, for they knew exactly that it seemed to them like throwing an impregnable cordon around Bull Run and the whole valley, but also and especially because of Captain Boteler's and Johnston's part in the growing prestige of the "Shenandoah" brigade.

The valley of Virginia represented one vast area under the Appalachian plateau bounded on the east by the Blue Ridge and on the west by the ridges of the Alleghenies called there the North mountains, stretching from the northern end of the Shenandoah near Staunton on the south to the Potomac on the north. It was originally a wilderness, more than a hundred miles. At the upper end was the Valley of Virginia proper, valley wide, while at Strasburg, fifty miles south, it was at its narrowest extreme width is scarcely twenty-five miles.

A broad meandering road, the Valley pike, traverses the entire region from north to south. Many streams and mountain passes intersect the road by the Blue Ridge and on the west by the ridges of the Alleghenies called there the North mountains, stretching from the northern end of the Shenandoah near Staunton on the south to the Potomac on the north. It was originally a wilderness, more than a hundred miles. At the upper end was the Valley of Virginia proper, valley wide, while at Strasburg, fifty miles south, it was at its narrowest extreme width is scarcely twenty-five miles.

The beautiful and fertile region called for protection for its own sake as well as for the sake of the vital consolidation of which the Shenandoah was a fair example. Its productive harvests and the rich supplies which it could furnish to the Confederate armies were also important.

It was especially important from a southern military viewpoint that the valley should be held intact by a Confederate army. No portion of the region could be given over unprotected to the enemy without serious detriment to operations north of Washington.

"If this valley is lost Virginia is lost," was Jackson's watchword.

Gen. Robert Patterson, 1861, Captain Hopkinson wrote to his sister in Philadelphia: "Oh, how sadly operations are to our destruction. General Jackson keeps his secrets as well as he fights, and sadly the enemy, but ourselves."

Without holding that Thomas Jackson was not on with fervor energy than ever to engage the Federal government under General Kelly at Romney. The southern army, the force, or ordinary routine of actual fighting. A large addition to the Confederate army had become necessary and to fill vacancies in the ranks of the regiments already in service and recruited to the full quota. The Confederate government decided to call for 400,000 volunteers in the new levy, but the Confederate authorities already in service had overrun a feeling of strength and security, resulting in comparative inactivity in the field for the latter part of a year. At the north the effect was precisely the contrary. The country. While the south was planning its organization of a new republic and completing up the name of General Davis as president, the north was in a state of painful succession in such a way as to Jackson for that office the verdict distrust of Jefferson Davis fosters in other word, the Federal government and the people of the northern and western states set to work with fortune or energy to counteract the reverses suffered in the beginning. Congress authorized the enlistment of half a million of men for three years, or as the war might last, and appointees down with wrath to stimulate the enlistments.

Lieutenant General Scott was now seventy years of age, burly, 55-inch waist around and shoulder were the prevailing lines. His shoes were heavy brogans tied with twine, and his soiled and worn clothes showed that he was without marks. An old shoulder hat was pulled over his face, and a tobacco leg hung from a button of his coat. The color of which was turned up to the side, originally of General Jackson's position in the battle of the 21st of July.

"Your part we have done," said Jones, "well, were you in the cavalry?"

"Yes, Jake, and proud of them. It I predict this portion of the state and to guard the Confederate capital," said Lieutenant General Banks, the Confederate government declared it was a war to arms in Winchester. This force, originally under the command of Gen. Patterson, was placed in command of Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, now advanced to the rank of a full general.

This was great news to the Richmond authorities, for they knew exactly that it seemed to them like throwing an impregnable cordon around Bull Run and the whole valley, but also and especially because of Captain Boteler's and Johnston's part in the growing prestige of the "Shenandoah" brigade.

The valley of Virginia represented one vast area under the Appalachian plateau bounded on the east by the Blue Ridge and on the west by the ridges of the Alleghenies called there the North mountains, stretching from the northern end of the Shenandoah near Staunton on the south to the Potomac on the north. It was originally a wilderness, more than a hundred miles. At the upper end was the Valley of Virginia proper, valley wide, while at Strasburg, fifty miles south, it was at its narrowest extreme width is scarcely twenty-five miles.

A broad meandering road, the Valley pike, traverses the entire region from north to south. Many streams and mountain passes intersect the road by the Blue Ridge and on the west by the ridges of the Alleghenies called there the North mountains, stretching from the northern end of the Shenandoah near Staunton on the south to the Potomac on the north. It was originally a wilderness, more than a hundred miles. At the upper end was the Valley of Virginia proper, valley wide, while at Strasburg, fifty miles south, it was at its narrowest extreme width is scarcely twenty-five miles.

The beautiful and fertile region called for protection for its own sake as well as for the sake of the vital consolidation of which the Shenandoah was a fair example. Its productive harvests and the rich supplies which it could furnish to the Confederate armies were also important.

It was especially important from a southern military viewpoint that the valley should be held intact by a Confederate army. No portion of the region could be given over unprotected to the enemy without serious detriment to operations north of Washington.

"If this valley is lost Virginia is lost," was Jackson's watchword.

DEMONSTRATIONS IN THE COUNTY

Three Adams County Orchards Scenes of State Demonstration Work Next Week. Will Show Fruit Growers how to Save.

The annual spring series of public demonstrations in orchard practice, under the supervision of State Zoologist H. A. Surface begin in Adams county, on Monday, May 5th. At these meetings the demonstrator will show the most modern and advanced methods of protecting fruit crops from such insects as codling moth and curculio, and from the various diseases. As the blossoms open earliest in the southern counties of the State, the demonstrations are scheduled to begin in these counties first. Spraying should not be done while the blossoms are on the trees, but rather during the four or five days immediately after the petals have fallen.

The public exercises begin at one o'clock in the afternoon, and the demonstrator will be present regardless of the weather. Everybody is invited to be present. The following dates are announced: Monday, May 5th, D. C. Jacobs, Gettysburg, R.No.5; Tuesday, May 6th, I. D. Mickley, Littlestown; Wednesday, May 7th, Jacob Geelhouse, Aspers.

Every effort will be given in pruning, spraying, cultivation, fertilization and other phases of orchard management. The demonstrators will show the best and cheapest materials that are prepared, and the proper ones in spraying orchards according to the varieties of fruit grown.

It is the object of the tests not only to show how to get rid of insects from the depredations of the pests, but also how to introduce in general practice improved methods of horticulture, by means of which a high quality of fruit may be grown at a minimum cost.

Spraying is one of the most disagreeable labors the farmer has to perform, and it may be truthfully said that it is one of the most necessary works. Two or three men are usually employed for a day's work on the public, needless expenditure of labour and dollars annually. All of these farmers are making it impossible for many of the male to provide their families with product formerly produced on farms, and to contribute to the general public require.

The following demands for extravagant waste—waste entirely out of keeping with the increased indigestion as a whole—railway employes apparently are on the consuming that a substantial would be up which would never be permitted by the public. They seem to think that if a strike is to avoid the railroads must give way—that the public will force them to give way, believing that arbitration alone take place, and that in the end the settlement of differences between railway demand and the wages they receive will result in their favor.

"In other words, the employes have everything to gain and nothing to lose."

The submission of the railroads' answer followed a series of conferences between the managers of railroads and a committee of the conductors' and trainmen's organization. Upon its receipt the conductors' and trainmen's committee went into conference to consider what further action should be taken.

The decision to ask the interstate commerce commission to allow a 5 per cent increase on freight of all the railroads was made known in a statement issued by Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio.

Mr. Willard is the head of a committee of railroad executives representing the principal lines east of Chicago and north of the Ohio river.

KILLED SON-IN-LAW

Blayer, With Block of Wood, Beat Albert Allentown.

Allentown, Pa., May 5.—Peter Eck, twenty-three years old, a farmer, who was beaten to death, according to the police, with a block of wood by his father-in-law, Henry Fetz, at the hot near Fogelsville, on Wednesday night, May 1, justice across the Lehigh county line.

Both had been drinking heavily, and Fetz in and his son-in-law interfered when Eck, it is alleged, beat his wife. The latter, it is said, had received several looks like a shaukles, with its epidermis. Fetz and his son, Harry, also have fled. Two state policemen are on his trail.

REFUSE TO PAY TRAINMEN MORE

Railroads Refuse to Grant Men's Demands.

WANT TO RAISE ALL RATES

Managers of Eastern Lines Declare Demands of Conductors and Others Would Cost $75,000,000 a Year.

New York, May 2.—Simultaneously the railroads of the east refused to grant the increases in their conductors' and trainmen for an increase in pay and announced that they would ask the interstate commerce commission to permit a increase of 5 per cent on all freight rates.

The refusal to grant higher wages to the conductors and trainmen, the chairmen of nine railroad presidents having been settled by arbitration, was made public by the conference committee of the managers of the eastern railroads.

The committee says the present rates of wages are liberal, and in many cases excessive, and that to request for an increase is declined "in the interests of owners of railroad securities, in the interests of all railroad employes and in the interests of the public as a whole."

"The wages and working conditions which you request," says the reply, "would increase the pay of the train conductors and trainmen of the railroads in the eastern district approximately $17,000,000, or 20 per cent over present wages.

"The increase would be equivalent to the payment of dividends at the rate of $425,00,000 of 4 per cent securities which would call for a preference over first mortgage bonds.

"If the railroads are forced to pay extraordinary wages to men in train service, the burden must fall on the public. You will readily see, therefore, why, in considering your demands, we hold the public interest paramount.

"Already the traffic of a growing country has overtaxed the facilities of railroads; and the heavy burdens incurred through unadvised legislation, such as extra crew bills—for which the investors and trustees of this trust in alone responsible—have forced the railroads to curtail service on the public, needless expenditures of millions of dollars annually. All of these features are making it impossible for many of the male to provide their families with product formerly produced on farms, and to contribute to the general public require

PLACE SIGNS ON STATE HIGHWAYS

Fine Metal Posts and Sign Boards Placed along the Pike from Gettysburg to Chambersburg. Foretells State Ownership.

The first precursors of coming state ownership of the Chambersburg & Gettysburg turnpike were observed on Friday when a flying motor truck sped from Chambersburg to Gettysburg distributing and erecting high-way signs and markers between the two points. The markers consist of substantial cast-iron pillars showing about eight feet above the earth with an open base of two and a-half feet. The sign is detachable, the total weight of pillar and sign being about two hundred pounds. At highways crossing the pike a pillar and sign will be placed, bearing the line, "State Highway," and a second line, "Gettysburg-Pittsburgh," an arrow pointing eastward for Gettysburg and westward for Pittsburgh. The letters are in white on a black ground. In some instances direct arrows are given, in figures, for next and route No. 11 in the state.

Each pillar is set in cement and then securely fastened against wind gust or bump. Where there are sharp or dangerous curves a number, "Curve," figuring is located at a suitable distance both east and west. Two men do the work directed by an engineer as to location and distances.

Among the people who will visit Gettysburg next July, when the memorial to the North and South meet in their reunion, will be William H. Bogen, the well-known manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company in Harrisburg. Mr. Bogen is not exactly a veteran of the Civil War, but he was here. He was a boy of eight and ran away from home to see the battle. He arrived, consisting of carrying water to the soldiers on the third day. He personally speaked for his service, however, instead of a medal of honor.

Mr. Bogen was born and reared at Fayetteville, the garden spot of the Cumberland Valley, and it is only eighteen miles from the battlefield. When the battle was fought and raged over the second day he got away from the parental roof and hiked it part of the way and rode on the rest in the farm field. He arrived on the field on the afternoon of the terrible third day and carried water from Spangler's Spring to where the fight had driven back the Confederates.

"I spent the whole night carrying water and when the sun came up I peeped over the horizon I was all in," says Mr. Bogen. "I did not have any shoes and precious little to eat. Between that and the weight of the water I went to tell you I was never so tired in my life. Will I be there on the 50th anniversary? I don't know. I should say I will.

"I will tell you an old telegrapher from New York who was in Hackett's store at Fayetteville when I enlisted gave him of myself a few months ago over the wire he thinks he will know me after fifty years. But then I was eight then and carried water for the men of blue and gray. I do not know the greatest experience of my life."

Mr. Bogen will be one of the paid-up patronet my dear old mother admonished with a poplar switch for disobeying the order and running away to the battle of Gettysburg.

ADAMS IN 7TH CLASS

Under New Law Adams County is in Next to Last Class.

Senator Cutlin has a bill to divide the counties of the state into nine classes. The measure has been introduced in the senate and Montgomery and Cumberland would be counties of the ninth class. Fulton would be in the eighth class, Adams and Bedford in the seventh.

STATE MEN HERE TO ENFORCE LAW

Two Officers Sent by State to Enforce Dog Quarantine now in Effect in Four Towns and Five Near by Townships.

Dog quarantines were put into effect Saturday in Gettysburg, Biglerville, Arendtsville and Bendersville and in the following townships, Straban, Cumberland, Tyrone, Menallen and Franklin. Two officers, commissioned by the State Livestock Sanitary Board, reported for duty and will patrol the four towns and five townships, shooting all dogs at large that are not both licensed and muzzled.

The yellow posters have been posted and the work of killing off all unprotected dogs will be started immediately. The officers will spend a number of days in Gettysburg and the balance will be spent in the other quarantined portions of the county. The killing of a lot of uncinimious canines is expected.

Deputy Dunsworth has promised the assistance of the town authorities in enforcing the quarantine and will instruct the police of the town to help in the shooting of dogs found on the street.

At the Lutheran parsonage a chimney was blown over and four windows were blown in by the force of the wind. The roof was considerably torn up, turned and carried for a distance of about 150 feet. The home of Mrs. S. O. Gardner a window sash with three panes of glass was blown into a room and the awning in front of the house was carried a distance of 150 feet. The awning was supported by a board from the awning was torn loose by the wind and was carried whirling around the corner of the house, was broken in a number of pieces.

One of the greatest freaks of the storm was the carrying of a roof 16 by 12 from the barn owned by the home of William Hendricks for a distance of over two hundred feet. When it struck a large apple tree. The tree was split in two and the roof completely covered it to split in half. The divided roof caught both sides of the tree and stripped off much of the bark. After being checked the roof continued its flight and finally came to rest a short distance to a stop.

The storm was by far the worst that York Spring has had for a number of years and residents, generally, are congratulating themselves that it lasted. There was no electrical display and the thunder sounded more distant. Gettysburg and other portions of the county was totally lacking at York Springs.

During the thunder storm of Saturday morning the home of Mrs. Harriet Taylor in Menallen township was struck and a valuable mare killed. Mrs. Mervin Knouse, was killed. The mare was valued at $200 while dairy implements and feed were also destroyed. The bolt was a "cold stroke" and the animal died before fire.

HURRICANE AT YORK SPRINGS

Buildings Unroofed, Trees Uprooted and Other Damage Done at York Springs when Hurricane Paid Twenty Minute Visit.

With terrific force a cyclone struck York Springs about eleven o'clock last Sunday morning and, following a path about a hundred yards wide through the center of the town, wrecked houses and did a great amount of damage. Many buildings were unroofed and portions of the town not in the direct line of the storm suffered no damage whatever.

For twenty minutes the wind raged with terrific velocity and many residents made preparations to leave the town. Among those who were George Daetrick and John Sadler, both of whom reside in substantial brick residences, and who felt the buildings reeling. In front of Mr. Daetrick's home was a large shade tree. A big pine tree was blown down on the front of Sadler's residence.

FIRST MEETING FOR NEXT YEAR

Spanish American War Veterans Select Gettysburg for 1914 Meeting. Company M. Represented in Offices.

At the meeting of the Fifth Pennsylvania Spanish American War veterans in Pittsburgh last week it was decided to hold the next annual meeting in Gettysburg starting August 27, 1914. This is the first convention for next year that has yet been secured.

Company M, of this remount, was recruited in Gettysburg and at last week's meeting in Altoona was represented by John D. Keith and James G. Mellhenny. When they entered at Altoona they found that many of their fellow veterans would like to come to Gettysburg next year and, after a little work and a formal invitation, the invitation was secured. The attendance will be about 400 or 500, it is thought. The meeting consists of a business session, a banquet and sight-seeing trip.

The day will be quite deep and, but did not fallen on these cross-pieces, there is little doubt that the entire structure would have had a tragic result. Luther Bonnell was in the yard adjoining the Mr. Rowe property when the tree was summoned hall. It was several minutes before he could realize that the tree was gotten out but, aside from a thorough scrambling, he suffered no ill effects from the experiences.

PRAISE FOR EDDIE

Eddie Plank Delights his Friends with Fine Game.

The feat of Eddie Plank on the base ball diamond Friday morning was today's city papers to devote much space to the doings of Gettysburg's hero. The Philadelphia Press says:

The polished pitching of Eddie Plank, the idol of them all in the matter of usefulness in his particular sphere, was the only redeeming feature of the Athletics' game with the Boston Nationals at Shibe Park yesterday. As cool as a cucumber and as calculating as a chess player, Plank shut out twenty-nine men to last anything in a one-day. This is only two more men than Walter Johnson has set down swings. He showed that his control was true by the number of bases on balls.

Ed once died a New York runner advances so far as third base. It was considered quite an event to record off the thirty-sixth pay-out that who is starting his twelfth season as a member of the Athletics in an unique way. Thrice New York has been shut out by Plank, and he has on all three occasions they failed to get a man to third base.

In seven of the nine innings, the Yankees were retired in one, two, three order. Only in the fifth and ninth were only two clean flingers of the veteran cross-fire artist.

A unanimous call was extended to him at a congregational meeting last Sunday and it was thought he would accept. Mr. Trostwidge would accept. The news of the decision came as a surprise to all as he did not know that his name was being considered by the Gettysburg congregation. It is not known why he has not accepting is because Mr. Trostwidge does not like the added responsibilities of the charge too great for his strength.

Falling through several decayed boards which covered an old well at the home of William Little, on West Middle street, Miss Marie Eckenrode, aged 17 years, had a narrow escape from drowning, early Monday afternoon, and was rescued by Luther Bonnell and Mrs. Little.

The boards which covered the well had been known to be decayed and other members of the family had walked over them during the day. Screams for help were heard by Mrs. Little and others, and Bonnell, who was working in the garden at the time, hurried to the scene. ANGRY SLAVS SET FIRE TO SHACK

Disgruntled Employees Cause Lots of Trouble East of Town. Burn Fellow Employees' Clothes. Free-for-all Fight.

Following a fire, in which the clothing of a dozen or more men was destroyed, a fight in the early hours of Sunday morning will have as special features and the show a heavy fine some well recognized expert. It is said that a fight was held for trial at Adams County Court.

All parties concerned were employed by the Maryland railroad at their work of grading for a new line of road from the Pipe Creek Quarries to Bridgeport, and all lived in a shack on the property of Mr. Sloss decided to visit and demonstrate their skill with the manly art. Accordingly, the evening, the opening day of the show, the "Battle Royal" of Messrs. C. C. Commons, of Carlisle, will be retained during the entire week for the benefit of the public. The fight will be between Wonda's marvelous tragedy as she told it to the police.

It appeared that on this St. Patrick's day what was considered a good time had on Immediate. The O'Rourke-Hennessy fight was to be the principal attraction and it was arranged that about 2 o'clock in the afternoon and evening, or as soon as so noted, business, for those two of the audience. This was over and the crowd started to the house. They thought it lots of fun to see the fighters and to circle in the water to their front door. Their mother's home and it was not long before a roll of some odd bounds he found floating in the cellar, and that is one of the fine pushing themselves around with a cistern pole.

But the water kept getting deeper and deeper, so much deeper that even the lower floor of the house was covered with water.

The flood began to look serious to the boys and they decided that somebody would come home. But she had been at work during the day at a home and when the widows came up she was not there. Then they went to the house before there to move out their effects. They found the house all right and no one home, and by this time a bridge had been built so they could get their wash and she was prevented from crossing.

So Mom lighted a lamp, and she and the children climbed into the bed and she and story to get away from the water. Meanwhile, the boys, Bonnell, Nat Nace told him that there was no reason for them to be afraid. If they were to danger the good saint that they would be safe. Following these about in the morning would take care of them. So they all went to sleep and the boys began to row. Being of the Irish faith they had all the boundless and was great.

SICKLES SAFE

And Veterans Will Not Be Jailed for Shortage.

New York State probably will take no action to have Gen. Sickles declared unaccounted for by General Daniel F. Sickles as chairman of the New York Monuments Commission in connection with the Gettysburg battlefield. Sickles is now in a county of state, then Assemblyman Sickles, and the organization of these reports.

"Why, I see no reason to take action," he went, I, of course, under my memorandum, have found that the fact is naturally assumed from the day of one accident at Nice, and we stayed at the Hotel Gettysburg. Sickles' memory is another was responsible for the loss. All sorts of attempts to get him to and other things that would have been done by Sickles. Perhaps it was worried about his two little friends and the fact that he was so poor and not see how they were getting on. Sickles is safe.

It became an international matter but it was arbitrary, by the American Commissioners, that the Gettysburg battlefield should be marked as a memorial to the valor of both the Union and Confederate soldiers who fought there. Presently the light he had seen appeared to be coming nearer and nearer. He could still hear the voices of the children of their home he saw a light coming in the window. It was a lamp and it was coming nearer and nearer. All sorts of attempts to get him to and other things that would have been done by Sickles.
